General Price List of Dahlias

We take great pleasure in enclosing herewith our general price list of dahlias. We are not going to issue an elaborate catalog this year. In place of this we are sending out this list and give you the benefit of the saving of the cost of the catalogue in the greatly reduced prices of our dahlias. You will find if you compare prices that you can save from twenty-five to fifty per cent.

Many of these dahlias sold at a high price not long ago. Are they not just as beautiful at from twenty-five to fifty cents as they were for five dollars?

We have had fifteen years’ experience in growing dahlias. Our present stock is what we have retained as having good qualities. We have discarded hundreds.

We ship dahlias all over the United States and absolutely guarantee them true to name. If any mistakes occur, and that is not often, we do not quibble, but replace them at first opportunity.

We get many letters like this: “I never saw a nicer lot of tubers.” That’s because we grow them on upland soil and know how to take care of them.

We wish to call your attention to the following dahlias which have not had as much publicity as others and not as well known, yet have great merit in their place in the dahlia world. Many people, perhaps you are one, do not care for the large exhibition dahlias, and to such

You will be surprised to know how many people will select any one of the four as being the most beautiful in your entire garden. Displayed in a mass, bouquets or baskets they are equal to any flower on earth.

MAPLE LEAF.—Peony. A good size, graceful peony with long stems; colors of the maple leaf touched by frost; most gorgeous flower in the garden. A satisfied customer in Indiana writes us: “The dahlia, ‘Maple Leaf,’ that you sent me is beautiful. The color is magnificent and the character of growth is very good as well as being a free bloomer on good stems of lasting quality on the bush. This is an easy plant to disbud and I think the name ‘Maple Leaf,’ does not do it justice. If I were to name it, I would call it Sunburst,” or something more beautiful, as ‘Maple Leaf’ sounds too tame for its brilliance.” Price...
